July 1, 2010 – KANSAS CITY, MO – Each year, the National Association of Farm Broadcasting (NAFB) Foundation, committed to the future of the ag and rural broadcasting industry, awards three college scholarships to deserving upper-classmen aspiring for a career in ag broadcasting and/or ag communications.

The Foundation is pleased to announce the 2010 selections:

- Taylor James, Kansas State University, Glenn Kummerow Scholarship, $5,000 winner
- Denise Donley, Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville, $4,000 winner
- Julie Martin, University of Wisconsin-Madison, $4,000 winner

The NAFB Foundation Board of Directors would like to congratulate these students. In addition to their scholarship, they will each receive a trip to Kansas City for the 2010 NAFB Annual convention, funded by the Foundation.

These scholarships and other projects that sustain the future and prosperity of the ag and rural broadcasting industry, would not be possible without the NAFB Foundation Boosters and supporters. Thank you to everyone who supports the NAFB Foundation.
